

Faculty of Health Sciences

Bachelor of Science in Environmental Health

Program Competencies

LO1: Analyze critically the scientific, social, economic, political, legal and ethical complexity of environmental issues

LO2: Assess the impact of physical, chemical and biological hazards on human health and ecosystems

LO3: Demonstrate knowledge of relevant environmental regulation, policies, standards and guidelines.

LO4: Apply contemporary knowledge, technical skills, and system thinking to prevent and remediate environmental health problems.

LO5: Plan, administer and implement culturally relevant community-based environmental health programs.

LO6: Communicate knowledge to promote environmental and public health awareness through engaging and networking with environmental health stakeholders.

LO7: Apply high principles of professionalism and ethics with a sense of civic and moral responsibility, and a commitment to basic values of human life and ecological well-being